THE SNAPSHOT

Vol. VI No. 12 Milwaukee-Downer College Dec. 10, 1948

HERE WE COME A-WASSAILING

Our voices rise through the chilly air, and our bobbing lanterns sparkle like stars in the darkness. We wear our warmest clothing, for the night is frosty and snow flakes flutter gently in our faces. Somehow, tonight we don't mind cold; we hardly feel it, for there is a radiant warmth within us.

Yes, it's Lantern Night, and the warmth we feel is that unforgettable glow which fills us every year as we bring the joy and music of Christmas to others--- the aged, the sick, the children without homes of their own. We will remember the Christmas spirit shining in their faces as we sing the traditional carols, so much a part of MDC.

Dec. 13th, with Ellen Weiss as chairman, we will again take up those lanterns made by studio club, and go out to find the true meaning of "Peace on earth; good will toward men."

CURTAIN TIME

Tonight and tomorrow night, as this columnist has been reminding you,

"The Second Shepherd's Play" will be presented by Mountebanks as an inter-departmental production. The string ensemble under the direction of Miss Beardsley will play 16th century music by Purcell, while Miss Tarver will lead an angel chorus and the choir in early English folk music as well as Christmas carols before and during the play. The colorful production will embody the spirit and traditions of Christmas, in addition to the robust humor of the early English miracle play. After each performance, wassail will be served in Greene. Tickets will be on sale at the door. Curtain time is 8:15.

WORTH THEIR WEIGHT IN GOLD

Freshmen with an eye for the future chose Helen Schroeder, Mary Jo Sanderson, Barbara Christensen, and Shirley Marine to lead their class.

Can you imagine Helen Schroeder's surprise to be told that some person named Mamie Glutz had called up and said she had a very important message for her? It was one of the election officials calling incognito to tell her she had just been elected class president. The girl with a smile for everyone also distinguished herself by being chosen for the college hockey team.

Likable Jo Sanderson has divided loyalties. Sharing her favor equally is a love for anything equine and a faithfulness to the yellow class. She rode to victory in both, having been chosen for the college riding team and elected vice president of her class. When she walked into her room and discovered the streamers and saw the lipstick on the mirror announcing her victory, all she could manage was a heartfelt "Oh Gee!"

Good news travels fast and far, it seems. Bobbie Christensen was walking down a street in Madison when she bumped into two fellow Downerites, just bursting to tell her she had been elected secretary of the freshman class. Not only did she win the votes of her classmates, but also the honor of being named to the college hockey team.

If there is fun and excitement in the locker room, you can be sure you will find Shirley Marine, freshman class treasurer, sharing it. Her prize possession is the drawing showing her entertaining at the First Hat Banquet. She lists music, Delicious apples, and Prince Valiant among her pet passions, but lively Shirley also has her serious side. She majors in English and has hopes of becoming a writer. It looks as if the yellow class picked the right girl to sign their checks.

Christmas drawings in this issue were done by Mac Barnes.

ONLY SEVEN MORE DAYS

MDC has generally agreed that Utopia is the two weeks in December known as Christmas vacation.

For Diane Sherwood and Josie Wright it is going to be a very musical affair. They will be serenaded by wedding bells as well as by jungle bells.

Marilyn Rasmussen will be a hostess to two term papers, while Lila Hankin will entertain a similar quest in Spanish. On the lighter side, Ellie Wenger insists that she will have time to curl her eye lashes and file her finger nails for the first time since college opened.

When Jane Glaubitz was asked about her Christmas plans she winked and said she would spend her vacation exchanging all her Christmas presents. (Here's hoping Santa doesn't read this.) Sue and Barbara Strecker are planning on making popcorn and cranberry chains for their Christmas tree during the first week of vacation. The second week will find them eating their creations. In keeping with the Christmas spirit, Ruth Franz will "roast chestnuts by an open fire."

Dottie Hauck's first big attempt at the culinary art will be preparing a turkey dinner for 10 people.

Jane Van Houten will be renewing her youth with a slumber party for all her friends---"just like we used to have in high school."

Bea Au will celebrate a Hawaiian Christmas in Chicago. She will meet many exchange students in the windy city and they will spend their vacations together.

All those interviewed are generally agreed that they will sleep late and spend a great deal of time with "that boy home from college." In conclusion may we say, "Whatever your plans ---a very Merry Christmas to all!"

ALBERT EXHIBITS PRINTS

Now on display in Albert are pictures taken from a portfolio of block printed textile designs made by the Milwaukee Handicraft Project, an educational project carried on by the Wisconsin WPA.

The work was done during the depression to provide employment for many jobless people. The original designs were made by well known artists while the block printing was done by the unemployed. Here's a chance to get some ideas for block printing you may want to do yourself.

QUICK SNAPS

CONGRATULATIONS TO

Jan Wells--Winner of riding plaque
 Pat Holm--Feminine lead role in recent radio play over WMLO
 Ellen Weiss--Feminine lead role in "Waltz Dream", production of Civic Light Opera Company
 Mac Barnes--Accepted for further writing for MADemoiselle College Board Writers of poetry accepted for publication in the National College Anthology: Josie Wright, Mary Webster, Barb Breslauer.

When greeted by an enormous yellow shmoo seated at their instructor's desk, Miss Morrison's class inquired politely about his presence. "A visitor," she explained; "you never know what you'll find in this class!"

ENGAGEMENTS

June Adler to Jack Kile
 Peggy Kniskern to Cornell Lugthart

When you see a familiar face, but can't recall the name, think before you commit the faux pas Miss Hanawalt warned her psychology class about. Don't say "Your face is so simple, but I can't remember your name."
